Claim 2 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claim 2 contains the recitation PLA, which appears to be the abbreviation for phospholipase A (page 6 of the specification). An amendment to the claims inserting -(phospholipase A)- after PLA in claim 2 would describe what is intended by the recitation PLA.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1 , 4, 5 and 6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Corliss (6,113,972) and abstract and see examples.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1,2,4-21 and 23-27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Corliss (6,113,972) alone or if necessary as further evidenced by Sugano.

Corliss discloses a phytosterol protein complex (abstract). Defatted egg yolk it used as a protein source in the examples. In example 1 the egg yolks are extracted to provide a defatted egg yolk. The extracted egg yolk is described as a protein. In example 2 the defatted egg yolk is described as 90 % cholesterol free. Then phytosterol in ethanol is combined with an aqueous solution of egg yolk and stirred, dried under vacuum to form a complex (column 3, lines 22-44). The product is contemplated for use in a variety of foods described at column 7, lines 30-35. The claims appear to differ from Corliss in the recitation of the inclusion of egg lipoprotein but one of ordinary skill in the art would expect the protein isolated from defatted egg would include lipoprotein. If further evidence were needed for the presence of lipoprotein in egg yolk protein, one would need only to look to Sugano at page 478, column 2, first paragraph. It is appreciated that the particle size of the plant sterol used is not mentioned but Corliss forms a powdered composition from a flaked product in example 4. To alter the particle size in Corliss would have been within the abilities of one of ordinary skill in the art. The properties of the complex set forth in claim 26 would have been expected from the Corliss composition.

Claim 26 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention.

Examiner cannot find support in the specification for the dispersibility properties of the complex that are set forth in claim 26.

Claims 3 and 22 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
